In order to help the candidates, we have asked some sample questions on each subject. English Language He turned 82 this summer, my father lost his stories. He's still lively, garrulous and energetic, and initially none of us noticed that the anecdotes were becoming repetitive, that he was forgetting names and places, that he had confusing times and references. A man of many narratives, we listened to the much repeated tales, sometimes with sham patience and sometimes visible impatience. Until the stories stopped. The words are dry. The memories are gone. The change happened so gradually that the final suddenness completely surprised us, his immediate family. And when the stories dried up, the energy seemed to have flowed away from his soul. This loss of energy became immediately and visibly apparent, as it was a trait, above all, that characterized my father. A child partition, Baba left his native Barisal in today's Bangladesh, on the eve of this major event My grandmother, who had been widowed since the birth of my father, her youngest son, decided to leave her sprawling farmhouse with extensive land and, along with her four other sons, immigrated to the still-formed Indian republic. So, family doctrine says, he liquidated some of his possessions, wrapped his immediate family and needed belongings onto a steamer, and sailed to the bustling, seething city of Calcutta to create a new life. On the subcontinent, the core rupture, the partition wreaked havoc among countless families, breaking away from home and threw me far away, without any possibility. Baby has often become that resort - his contribution to make a significant difference in families struggling to survive with a degree of dignity. His experience of early loss and deprivation seemed strangely conversational to endow him with the generosity of the soul, which I had not yet encountered in another person. It was astonishing to see this extraordinary man whose soul was the mind, heart and soul of a Colossus. In an order to revive his slacking interest, I urged him to start writing down stories from his life. I bought him a notebook, and great bloom announced his task. The stories were my stock in the trade. I was fueled by an early passion for storytelling and story writing in a teaching career focused on literacy. I have specific strategies to build a writing habit for my students, focused on the belief that we all have stories to tell. As children became confident and joyful storytellers, acquiring their benchmarked literacy outweighed those of their peers. Can I use these strategies to draw forgotten stories from Baba? Did these forgotten stories, however, help him reconstruct a sense of self? As people get older, they tend to lose their memories. Asking an old man who loses his memory to write stories from his life can help them reconstruct their sense of identity. The divacy was a very disruptive event in the history of our subcontinent, and we need to make sure our grandchildren know about it. Sometimes it's exhausting and boring to listen to old people telling the same stories over and over again. Because the author encountered genetic research that indicated that it helped other people as well. Because the writer thought that thinking about the past would help their father regain his memory. Because the author saw that students have benefited tremendously from similar strategies to their teaching careers. Because the author has done the same in the past and as a result has regained his memory. Through his generosity, he was a source of help in a difficult situation. He helped them find lost family members and contact them. He helped them by helping them with food and medicine when they needed it. He told them stories about their country, as he had such a large amount of stories and an anecdotes Because stopping stories stops as the analysis of news and current affairs increased, and the author and his family were very interested in the same things. Because one day the author asked their father about the partition and forgot that it had ever happened. Because the author wanted to hear more stories about his grandmother, but he refused to talk about it. Because the author and his family listened impatiently to his stories, as he often repeated them and did not realize that he was forgetting or confusing parts of the stories. General knowledge The U.S. House of Representatives has indicted President Donald Trump for abuse of power and obstruction of Congress, which was the culmination of Democrats' effort to further instigate partisan tensions in Washington and deepen the country's ideological divisions. The historic polls, which won the support of almost all Democrats in the House of Representatives but not a single Republican, have made Trump the third president in American history - and the only president likely to win his party's nomination for re-election. The Senate will hold a hearing early next year to decide whether to convict the president of the charges and remove him from office, though Republicans, who hold a majority in the chamber, will almost certainly exonerate him. House Democrats testified from more than a dozen witnesses, held weeks of hearings and wrote hundreds of pages documenting Trump's efforts to pressure the [1] president to investigate the former vice president [2] and his son. Both houses of Parliament are simultaneously launching India's 2019 draft law on the protection of personal data (the Bill), which seeks to protect the privacy of individuals relating to their personal data. But in the end, it is clear that it is not intended to fulfill its promise. Because, even if you rightly require handlers of the data to abide by globally agreed rules - by getting a person's consent first - it disappointingly gives the government broad powers to dilute these provisions into agencies. Recently, messaging platform WhatsApp said that some Indian journalists and rights activists were among those spying on the use of technology manufactured by an Israeli company that, by its own admission, only works for government agencies around the world. Importantly, one of the first to raise the red flag of the bill's problematic clauses was Justice N Srikrishna, whose committee report forms the basis of the bill. He used words such as Orwellian and Big Brother in response to the removal of safeguards against government agencies' actions. In its report last July, the committee noted that threats to privacy stem from state and non-state actors. It therefore requested that the exemptions be watertight, narrow and that limited conditions can also be used. He also proposed that the government introduce a law on non-consensual processing of data. The concern about the bill concerns the Constitution of the Indian Data Protection Authority (DPA), i.e. the monitoring and enforcement of the provisions of the law. The committee shall be headed by one chairman and shall have up to six full-time members selected by a panel of government candidates. This completely ignores the fact that government agencies can regulate the bill, they themselves are significant collectors and processors of data. The sweeping powers of the bill give the government meaningless gains in the landmark KS Puttaswamy vs Union of India case, which ends up with the realization that privacy is an integral part of life and freedom and therefore a fundamental right. This idea of privacy is certainly not reflected in the bill's current form. The author believes that if the members are candidates for the government elected by the DPA, the DPA will not be effective in regulating government agencies. The author believes that government agencies should not regulate the bill. The author considers that data collectors and processors should not be regulated by persons who have no experience in collecting and processing data. The idea of privacy is irrelevant to the bill. In its current form, the draft law does not adequately address the idea of privacy as a fundamental right. Since the bill gives the government sweeping powers, it is pointless to reflect the idea of privacy in the bill The idea of privacy can be overridden by government agencies, given their role in protecting citizens. Limiting the basis on which government agencies can act in a way that threatens individuals' right to privacy. Endangering the right to privacy for state and non-state actors. Watertight protection for government agencies processing individuals' data The right to privacy is exempt from the scope of the bill. Yes, that's it. Without gathering journalists' WhatsApp messages, the government cannot prevent it from report against it. Yes, that's it. reporting on issues that show the government's situation in a bad light creates disharmon, and the government has used proportionate force to prevent this. No, no, no, no, it's not a legitimate goal to observe a journalist to intimidate him. No, no, no, no, the government should have taken measures such as imprisoning the journalist to ensure he did not continue reporting. The bill would keep its promise to protect the privacy of individuals related to their personal information. The bill does not keep its promise, as the government must have such exemptions in order to carry out its work effectively. The bill failed to deliver on its promise to provide individuals with personal data protection of human rights. The bill bill the government would not be able to implement it. Logical reasoning rahul dravid, the head coach of India's under-19 cricket team, explained that the 2018 FIFA World Cup team selection strategy was about providing an opportunity for many more players to come into the Indian Under-19 fold. He explained that more than winning - which is not the right touchstone for the success of a program at this level - what matters is how many players are able to move on to the next level that plays first-class cricket. That's why he consciously decided not to select players from the previous World Cup for the 2018 Under-19 World Cup squad. Sport is more important than winning or losing. Choosing an inexperienced team at under-19 level ensures failure and players who experience failure learn to be humble. The Under-19 World Cup is a stepping stone to first-class cricket and winning may not be the ultimate goal. When players are under the age of 19, they don't feel stressed about playing in the World Cup; However, as they age, their ability to play well depends on how many matches they have played before. The team loses the World Cup, but 5 players from the team go to play first-class cricket. The team won the World Cup and 5 players from the team go to play first-class cricket. The team has won the World Cup and no players will be elected to the next Under-19 World Cup team. A team that wins the World Cup and selects 1 player for the national team. Players who have played in international competitions face home competition better than those who have not. First-class cricket selectors evaluate under-19 cricketers based on their individual performance. First-class cricket selectors assess under-19 cricketers based on the win-loss ratio of the team they were part of. First-class cricket selectors assess cricketers under the age of 19 based on their ability to deal with injuries. CLAT LLB Previous year Papers PDF [2019] The exam paper for admission to llb or the 5-year integrated legal program last year was 4 series/sets. The previous year's papers are in the table below as per the old exam pattern. CLAT LLM Previous year Papers PDF [2019] Alike UG, the PG exam was divided into 4 series. Here are the previous year papers for all series of solutions: CLAT expected questions about LLB exam Since the authorities have made changes to the CLAT exam pattern this year, it is expected that the difficulty level of the exam and the issues may well be easily moderate. Here are some sample questions that are expected to come with the exam: Passage 01 The idea of in personlessness is partly Eliot's way of deflecting current thinking poetry away from ideas of originality and self-expression, which originated from romance. Eliot's own personality, and the education he received at Harvard, put that emphasis on the individual, which was extremely distasteful. Much friendlier him to make it poetry is not the gushing of personal emotions and personal experience, but rather the transcendent of the individual's kind of tradition, which is spoken through and transmitted by each poet. The best part of the pet job, he sat on, not the ones that were the most original, but those in which the voice of his predecessors may be the purest heard talking through it. Therefore, a great distinction must be made between the mind of the individual, the experience of the human being, and the voice spoken in poetry. It wasn't an original thought- Shelley, as we saw, was something very similar to her Protecting Poetry-De Eliot was the first to make it the cornerstone of a bit of a poetic aesthetic. The objective correlation, finally, is actually an embedding of English empirical attitudes: he believes that the best way to express emotion in art is to find a small vehicle that gestures, action or concrete symbolism, rather than approaching directly or descriptively. This is undoubtedly true: little is gained from fiction or poetry by having the characters (or narrator) say what the feeling is: they must be shown in some way in words or actions. This is perhaps little more than the ancient distinction (first made by Plato) between mimesis and diegesis. The former is a demonstration of something about the character in his own words, or the actions that you actually see on stage when it's a play, while the latter tells the audience or reader things they don't see for themselves or experience the direct speech of characters. All of Eliot's major critical ideas are flawed and unsatisfactory, and perhaps their long-standing currency indicates the theoretical vacuum into which they were launched. (Peter Barry: Theory before liberal humanism) Tell us about Eliot's life and how education played an integral role in shaping his mind to clarify how Eliot's ideas were flawed and unsatisfactory Describe Eliot's contribution and ideas for poetry Understand objective correlation, which states Eliot The individual plays a key role in forming good The work should be a different approach and the artist should not imitate the other artist An artist should be able to To articulate his predecessor's ideas well enough Passage 02 The [x] mission is a highly complex mission that represents a significant technological leap from isro's previous missions. This included the Orbiter, Lander and Rover to explore the unexplored [y]. The mission aims to expand the moon's scientific knowledge by detailed study of topography, seismography, mineral identification and distribution, surface chemical composition, thermo-physical characteristics of thethermosoil and composition of the thin lunar atmosphere, leading to a new understanding of the origin and evolution of the moon. After injecting [x], a number of manoeuvres were carried out to raise its trajectory, and by 31 December 2019, it was announced that it would be in the right area. Pasting (TL) maneuver, the spacecraft escaped orbiting the earth and followed the path that took it nearby to the moon. On August 20, 2019, it was successfully inserted into orbit around the moon. Orbiter, designed for orbit around the moon, enriches understanding of the evolution of the moon and mapping minerals and water molecules from the Polar Regions, using eight state-of-the-art scientific instruments.
